Market Monkey Price Indicator Charts

For ASX Market Close, 13 December 2024

Australian shares ended the week at a near four-week low, with the S&P/ASX 200 Index sliding 0.4% to 8,296 pts, marking its worst weekly loss since August. Heavyweight miners, including BHP and Fortescue, were hit by a dip in iron ore prices following underwhelming stimulus measures from China. Financials showed slight gains but logged a 2% weekly decline, while gold miners tumbled on steady bullion prices.

Looking ahead, the market eyes next week's Federal Reserve meeting, with expectations of cautious rate cuts in 2024 dampening optimism. Domestically, stronger household spending during November's Black Friday sales may provide some resilience, as indicated by the CommBank Household Spending Index's rise. The outlook remains tempered by global uncertainties, including China's slower growth and potential U.S. policy shifts.
